

SOCIAL IMPACT AWARDWINNER: CTG, a Safran Group company – Actuation Business Unit

Crompton Technology Group (CTG), part of Safran, is a UK-based centre of excellence in advanced composite design and manufacture, specialising in high-performance structural components for military and commercial aerospace.

Beyond engineering innovation, CTG is driven by a strong commitment to social impact, structured around three pillars, People, Industry, and Community, and delivered through the Culture & Community Council, a colleague-led network guiding initiatives across inclusion, wellbeing, sustainability, STEM education, and local engagement.

Through the People pillar, CTG fosters a culture of belonging, with five active Employee Resource Groups, dedicated mental health champions, and initiatives such as free gym memberships, a wellness room, and peer-support workshops. During Mental Health Awareness Week 2025, CTG hosted interactive sessions featuring “Sprocket,” the site’s therapy dog, reinforcing wellbeing as a shared value.

Under Industry, CTG drives sustainable innovation, reducing energy use by over 400 MWh through waste-heat recovery systems and advancing composite recycling research with UK universities.

Through Community, colleagues dedicated 728 volunteering hours in 2025, raised £3,480, and partnered with 10 local organisations, including schools and charities, supporting food banks, youth wellbeing, and STEM outreach reaching 1,200+ students.

This people-powered approach has created measurable cultural, environmental, and social impact. Looking ahead, CTG will embed these programmes deeper into its strategy, expand partnerships, and empower more colleagues to lead, ensuring social responsibility remains integral to how the company works, innovates, and grows.
